Ever wonder how China went from famine-ravaged to the world's largest economy by PPP? Spoiler: It didn't rely on neoliberalism or Marxism. It relied on shrewd, long-term statecraft. Let's break down how China dodged every U.S. attack and still became a superpower. 1/10

The US thought Tiananmen was China's "Berlin Wall moment." They couldn't have been more wrong. Rather than crumble, China turned every pressure point into an opportunity. America's hopes? Crushed. 2/10

While Soros and his NED operatives played puppet-master, China just kept building. 1997? Asia's financial system crashed, but China stood firm, resisting the IMF and its neoliberal poison. 3/10

The magic ingredient? Deng Xiaoping's "Socialism with Chinese Characteristics." Not Marxism, not neoliberalism just pragmatic, results-oriented policy prioritizing national strength over ideological purity. 4/10

The results? 90% homeownership with no real estate taxes or inheritance taxes. No predatory mortgages. America's housing market? A dystopian joke by comparison. 5/10

Free kindergarten. Almost free PhDs from Tsinghua. Public healthcare from cradle to grave. That's China. Meanwhile, Americans go bankrupt for a cancer diagnosis. 6/10

Forget Silicon Valley or Wall Street. China's real strength is its families. It built a family-friendly society where you're not crushed under debt. 7/10

Education is better than what America had in the '90s before all the woke alphabet soup ruined it. Kids are taught math, science—real knowledge, not “safe spaces.” 8/10
